From the Jamestown Journal. Close upon the shore of Linke Wineniscogee is a town, and in that town dwells a man Whom we will call Crouch. Mr. Crouch keeps a store; as he is a gehial, accommodating man, he keeps for sale everything which the good people in the country can reasonably expect him to keep. Particularly has it been the practice of Mr. Crouch to keep a barrel of whisky on the tap in his collar. One in the fall and the other in the spring will generally carry him through. He is very careful to whom he sells, and so far as known, the author-ities have never given him any trouble. One day Mr. Eliphatet Spooner on tered the store with a slight protuber-ance visible upon his left breast. Mr. Spooner was a deacon, and a most proper man. He called the merchant saide and asked him if he had any, good
